New owners transforming warehouse into boutique hotel

BY BOB DEMAREE

What was once a livery stable, a bottling plant and a newspaper warehouse is now being transformed into what will become The Chandler: Madison's Boutique Hotel.

Matt and Dan Chandler were looking for a location to develop a small hotel in downtown Madison when former Madison Courier publisher Curt Jacobs suggested the newspaper's former warehouse at 111 E. Second St., used to store massive rolls of newsprint, barrels of ink and other printing supplies for the last 50 years.

"I knew instantly that this was the project for us," said Dan Chandler. "I knew that we could manage it. I knew that this had historic charm. It has the exposed brick, it has these rafters, these tall ceilings, and it has the history and this charm. It was everything that we wanted and it allowed us to be in the heart of Madison, and we knew that would be an attraction to other people."

Bob Demaree

The former Madison Courier warehouse that is being developed into a boutique hotel at 111 E. Second St. in downtown Madison. The 1854 Federal-style structure was first a livery stable and later a bottling plant in the 1940s before being used for six decades to store newsprint, ink and other printing products until the 184-year-old newspaper closed it's printing plant in 2020.

The Chandlers purchased the building in January and hope to open the hotel in nine to 12 months with the first phase of the project creating five rooms on the second floor along with an owner's suite. "We're full speed ahead," said Matt, adding the timeline depends on how the project moves along.

There will be a grand staircase in the lobby leading up to the second floor with all windows fully restored, said Matt. The garage door in the front of the building will be converted into the main entrance. The second phase will add three more rooms on the first floor.

"This building itself dates back to the 1850s before the Civil War," said Dan. An 1859 city directory listed the building as McCubbin and Sons Livery and for several years after that it was used as a livery and stable — the last by Louis Eisenhardt who died in 1935. Try Me Bottle Works was located in the structure beginning in 1939, and after that operation closed

City considering new zoning classifications on riverfront

Issue brought up to 'get the ball started'

BY MARK CAMPBEL

Madison Plan Commission was asked to give some thought to creating a new zoning classification for Madison's riverfront to possibly make more property available for commercial development in the future.

Nicole M. Schell, the city's director of planning, approached the Plan Commission with the idea near the end of Monday's meeting. She said the city has received an inquiry about commercial development opportunities on the north side of Vaughn Drive and that it might be time for the Commission to consider if there should be changes to the city's zoning ordinance to allow more mixed use commercial opportunities in an area that is a huge draw to both local residents and tourists.

Schell said one option would be to create a new classification allowing mixed use where commercial and residential could coexist in a specific area on the north side of Vaughn Drive. The commercial uses would be "very similar to the downtown commercial district" but with "more limited uses," Schell said.

Hanover continues upgrades to Rainbow Park

BY BOB DEMAREE

Improvements to the Hanover parks system continue to move forward with work currently taking place at Rainbow Park and more upgrades coming soon at Hanover Community Park, Clerk-Treasurer Keith Mefford said in an update at Tuesday's Hanover Town Council meeting.

Upgrades to Rainbow Park are being funded by a $24,900 grant from the Community Foundation of Madison and Jefferson County. Mefford said walking paths are being created along with paved parking spaces. He said there will be a pickleball court and a new basketball court as well as new playground equipment coming to the park.

Mefford said the walking paths will tie into the pickleball court, the basketball court and the shelter house along with the parking lot, which will provide handicap accessibility.

He is hopeful that in the future the town might be able to partner with other groups to continue making improvements at Rainbow Park including reaching out to Thornton Terrace about connecting the healthcare facility to the park.

"We don't have enough funding to do everything this year," said Mefford.

As someone who lived in that area of town as a youth, Mefford said he's pleased to see what's being done to improve Rainbow Park and the greater opportunities that will afford residents of the community. "We didn't count that as much of a park when I grew up, so it's kind of cool" to see what is now coming to that park, he said.

Town officials are anticipating hearing back in April about grant funding through the Indiana Department of Natural Resources that they anticipate will provide funding for several improvements to Hanover Community Park.

Mefford said once work begins on Community Park, the city will have to coordinate work with all of the events scheduled there throughout the upcoming season.

"We're going to have to plan things to be able to continue to have our events," he said, noting the ongoing activities will need to be coordinated with construction projects. "It's going to be exciting, but challenging. Hopefully people will see that, but we've got to keep it safe for the kids."

One upcoming event Mefford said is being planned for the Community Park is a car show on Aug. 6 that will include music and food trucks. "It has the potential to be an amazing event," he said, adding details still need to be finalized before council approval will be sought.

In other business:

• Approved the purchase of a backup generator for the city's sewage lift station for the College Hills area at a cost of $22,500 from the sewer plant fund. The generator will allow the lift station to continue to operate when regular electricity goes out. Scott Williams, the town's superintendent of Streets and Utilities, said power was out for about an hour last week. The state recommends having a backup generator for such situations, because power being out too long can create problems with overflow from the lift station.

Appalachian blues coming to Taproom

When I asked Chris Stevens, bass player in the New Orleans-based Ferd Band trio, how to describe their music, he said, "It's like the Appalachian sound and the Delta Blues got together to spend a little time hanging out down on the Bayou."

CHARLIE ROHLFING
CHARLIE'S BEAT

The Ferd Band, named after lead singer, songwriter and fiddle player Ferd Moyse, will be playing at the Off-Broadway Taproom this Saturday. It should also be mentioned that Ferd plays a mean Samsonite suitcase drum while he sings and fiddles. Ferd is also known around folk music circles from his time with Virginia-based band The Hackensaw Boys.

And as a bonus for all the Tillers fans around the area, Joe Macheret, the fiddle and guitar player for that popular Cincinnati band, will be playing an opening set at the Taproom to kick the night off.

"The band is a relatively new project," explains Chris Stevens. "Ferd and I connected when we were both in Hackensaw

COVID-19 numbers continue to decline

At same time, Carroll records 43rd death

BY THE COURIER STAFF

With Kentucky's COVID-19 positivity rate now at 4.17%, Gov. Andy Beshear said Monday there is "a lot of good news" as coronavirus cases continue to decline.

"The top line today is that while we still have some struggles, things continue to move in the right direction, and they are continuing to move at a regular pace. Every metric is moving in the right direction."

Meanwhile, Indiana positivity rate is even lower at 2.8%.

However, at least one new death has been attributed to the virus in local counties. Carroll County recorded its 43rd COVID-related death but death totals remain the same in Jefferson County with 142, Trimble County with 39 and Switzerland County with 19.

Switzerland County's positivity rate at 8.4% is the highest in the area while Jefferson County's positivity rate is 1.5% and Carroll County's positivity is 1.59%. Data from the Kentucky Department of Public Health indicated that Trimble County's positivity rate was zero with no new cases reported there.

Beshear said Monday he is pausing the standing weekly COVID news conferences but added he will continue to keep Kentuckians informed of the virus as needed.

"We know so much more about the virus and how to fight it," Beshear said. "In many ways, it has become a part of our daily lives. If today is the last update we give, living with COVID is not ignoring COVID. It is having the information to be empowered to make the right decision and to protect ourselves."

Traffic stop nets drug arrest

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Madison Police arrested a local man on drug charges Monday after a search conducted during a traffic stop discovered methamphetamine.

Kaleb Adam Skirvin

Kaleb Adam Skirvin, 27, Madison, was stopped by Patrolman Curtis Shelpman on Monday on Oak Hill Drive near State Road 7. A check showed that he was Driving While Suspended due to a prior conviction and a search of the vehicle located the methamphetamine.

Skirvin was charged with Level 6 felony drug possession and Class A misdemeanor for Driving while Suspended-Prior.

Shelpman was assisted at the scene by Captain Season Jackson and Patrolman Graham Heffelfinger.

There are already some commercial properties on the north side of Vaughn Drive and there is some open property that was formerly zoned commercial or industrial but now sits undeveloped as green space like the zone to the south side of Vaughn Drive. Much of the area is already occupied by structures — most of them protected by the Historic District — so there would be only a limited number of properties impacted by any reclassification.

One such site is a city-owned lot at Jefferson Street and Vaughn Drive — a former coal yard — which Schell said the city has been approached about potential development. The lot, used for outdoor storage for years, was bought by the city to secure the site from unfavorable development along the riverfront. At the time of the purchase, Mayor Bob Courtney said the city had no specific plans for the corner lot but might want to do something at the site in the future and the property might not again be available.

"I did not vote to approve buying that property so we could turn around and sell it," Plan Commission member Patrick Thevenow, who also serves on Madison City Council, said.

Thevenow noted the Plan Commission "has a long history of being very stringent" concerning development along the riverfront and protective of open space that does not diminish access to or views of the river. "Over 40 years of maintaining that open space the community has grown very appreciative of that lack of development on the riverfront," Thevenow said.

Josh Wilber, a member of the Plan Commission who also serves on the city's Historic District Review Board, said the proposal was "such a general request" that it would be difficult to consider without further review and discussion. "We need a well-thought-out plan ... and I could see problems with the Historic Board, too," he said.

Darrell Henderson, chairman of the Plan Commission, said the discussion should probably involve even more than just those boards and that more groups and individuals would probably want to be involved in the discussion.

"We need a broader group," Henderson said. "Parts of it could be good but we are opening it up to so much."

Schell said Monday's discussion was just an advisory to "get the ball started" and that no action was being sought at this time.

Boys, but Ferd Band is a new direction for us. We added Matt Morelock on banjo, and we've done some recording, but this is our first road tour. I'm calling it our Maiden Midwest Voyage through Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio."

When I asked Ferd what people can expect from their live shows he said, "It's a big love fest, a joyous time. It's the rowdiest fiddle and banjo party you'll ever go to, and you'll be amazed how much noise three people can make!"

Mad Hop Music Festival tickets are now on sale

After a huge inaugural success in the fall of 2019, the one-day Mad Hop Festival is back on track and ready to once again delight area music fans. The new date is Saturday, April 30, 2022.

The format of the event — 35 bands spread over 7 downtown venues all furiously playing for one frenetic 8-hour day — makes for one of the most exciting and joyful experiences in live music.

This year, with one wristband, you'll be able to "hop" from House of Jane, The Taproom, Thomas Family, Mad Paddle, Electric Lady, Red Bicycle Hall and City Hall. That's right, they're taking over the City Council chambers for an afternoon of live music.

Handout

The full line-up will be announced very soon, but if you know you're going and want to save some money, you can buy Early Bird tickets right now, courtesy of Friendship State Bank. Just go to MadisonTravelCompany.com and scroll down to find the ticket link.

HOT TIP OF THE WEEK

If ever there was any doubt that Madison is the hottest little music town in Indiana, allow me to enter Exhibit A into evidence: In this week alone there are 24 live music events happening at 10 different venues. Part of that high number is attributable to St. Patrick's Day landing on Thursday this week, with venues ramping up the party and the music to celebrate the occasion. At Rivertown Grill they're doubling up on the fun, with a first band starting at 6 p.m. and a second taking over at 10 p.m. and running until 2 in the morning! As the Irish would say, "Lá Fhéile Pádraig sona duit!" (Happy St. Pat's Day!)

Charlie Rohlfing is a retired advertising man and partner in The Red Bicycle Hall music venue. Look for his distinctive fedora bobbing above the crowd, anywhere live local music is happening.

Let Us Pause To Honor the Memory of Mrs. Irma M. Carter Kyle

Mrs. Irma M. Carter Kyle, age 103, of Madison, Indiana and formerly of Ridley Park, Pennsylvania entered this life on August 10, 1918 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. She was the loving daughter of the late, Charles and Ida Kuhn Carter. She was raised in Bridesburg Section of the Great North East of Philadelphia and was a 1936 graduate of Jules E. Mastbaum Career and Technical Education High School. She married Victor S. Kyle in June of 1945. This happy union of nearly 66 years was blessed to raise a son, Wayne. She worked several different department stores including Woolworth's before going to the Franklin Institute as an administrative assistant. In her younger years, she enjoyed a modeling career for several years. Irma and Victor settled in Ridley Park near Philadelphia, residing there for 55 years until she moved to Madison on January 1, 2012 to be near her son. She was a member of the Ridley Park United Presbyterian Church, Ridley Park Swim Club and Jolly Girls. She loved arts, crafts and shopping expeditions. Irma will be remembered as a delightful lady with a quick wit and always looking her best. Irma died on Monday, March 14, 2022, at 8:16 a.m. at the River Terrace Health Campus in downtown Madison, Indiana.

A LOVING FAMILY

Irma will be missed by her loving son, Wayne Richard Kyle, and Peter Woodburn of Madison, Indiana; her niece, Janice Dunlap; her nephew, Charles Richard Carter; her dearest friends, Tracy Martin, Doug and Suzi Martin, Alice and Jim Jackson, Mary Kay and Kevin McCubbin. She was preceded in death by her parents, Charles and Ida Kuhn Carter, her husband of nearly 66 years, Victor S. Kyle, died March 13, 2011, her brother, Charles Carter and his wife, Montrue, her sister, Margaret Becker, her nephew, Jeff Carter and her nieces, Irma and Millie Becker.

For a limited time, the American Red Cross has resumed testing all blood, platelet and plasma donations for COVID-19 antibodies. Plasma from routine donations that have high levels of COVID-19 antibodies may be used as convalescent plasma to help meet the needs of COVID-19 patients with weakened immune systems.

Red Cross blood supply remains vulnerable, and individuals are urged to schedule a blood or platelet donation. In the days and weeks ahead, it's critically important the Red Cross maintains a readily available blood supply so hospital patients can receive the care they need. To make an appointment, use the Red Cross Blood Donor App, visit RedCrossBlood.org or call 1-800-733-2767.

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Readers: In light of St. Patrick's Day, I want to share this story from "Same Boat," who wrote a response recently to share the story of how he reconnected with his fiancee from 28 years ago. May your holidays be equally serendipitous!

Dear Annie: Thank you for publishing my response to "Nostalgic and Regretful." I wanted to share with you something I recently wrote regarding my fiancee and my love story.

We met in March 1994 at a local pizzeria. I was a cook there, and she had just been hired as a hostess. At the risk of sounding cliche, I had never seen someone so beautiful, and to this day, only my children have ever equaled that sight.

The attraction was instant, but it went beyond that. Never before had somebody had my back the way she did. She was my staunchest ally, which I desperately needed at that time. For much of the summer of '94, I was functionally homeless, I barely had a penny to my name, and yet she never wavered.

But we were kids, and I was an idiot, fearful and insecure. I listened to advice and gossip from some not-so-well-meaning people. Rather than communicating with the young woman who had been nothing but honest with me, I broke up with her, and in doing so, devastated myself. She is not one to put up with baloney, and she wasn't dealing with mine.

We see each other for nearly 30 years.

We became Facebook friends in 2009 and would sometimes wish each other happy birthday. I didn't think much of it, as I dubbed Facebook "where old friendships go to die."

After three failed relationships, I was done with romance. I was jaded and cynical, tired of being controlled and cheated on. Tired of my own faults, tired of putting my heart and soul into people, relationships and jobs that never put forth the same effort.

Then she popped up on my feed.

There was something curious about it: Her name was her maiden name. My divorce from my second marriage had finalized a few months prior, and suddenly, there were no chains holding me.

Then, I discovered her divorce finalized one day before mine.

That night, I reached out and asked if she wanted to go out and get some burgers.

While we didn't get those burgers that night, we did start talking again. Soon after, I started preaching again. It's funny, because when I was in the hospital with COVID-19, I prayed if God got me out of there, I would go back to working in the church. It didn't even have to be as a minister. If He wanted me to scrub bathrooms, I'd do it gladly.

So, there I was, back in ministry after more than seven years away, and right after the first service, I got a text from her: "You know, I'm only 20 minutes from you."

My son and I arrived right to the place where she was camping. "I better be getting a hug," she said.

We were set in stone that day and have been ever since. At the beginning, there were moments where I thought maybe we had been cheated out of 28 years together, but no longer. After all of the mistakes, sins and bad decisions of my life, I realized she deserves better than the way I was at 19, 27, 38. I want to be the best version of myself for her, because she deserves nothing less. I can never say about anyone else what I can say about her: that she truly makes me a better man.

Paranoid boyfriend ignores my boundaries

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I recently reconnected with a man I was engaged to as a young girl. We broke up because of a misunderstanding. Now, decades later, we have reunited.

He is loving and kind most of the time. However, when he feels I have slighted him, he will tell me that he's breaking up with me because of some supposed slight that I have committed against him. Usually, it's something small, like being unavailable on a specific day or saying I have to go someplace and cannot message him for a while. He then accuses me of infidelity and/or not loving him "enough."

I have spoken to him many times about personal boundaries, and the life that I am enjoying living and have enjoyed for many years without him. I would very much like to incorporate him into my life, but he sometimes demands much more of me than what I can give.

When he threatens a breakup, I am crushed. I have abandonment issues to begin with, and this exacerbates those feelings.

I truly love him and want him in my life. What can I say to make him stop throwing these temper tantrums when he feels he's been slighted, when those perceived slights are unintentional? — Confused Lady

Dear Confused Lady: Threatening to leave you after the slightest disagreement is a form of verbal abuse. It sounds like he's trying to gaslight you into spending all your time with him — and such controlling behavior is certainly a red flag.

That said, constantly reminding him of the life you "enjoyed for many years without him" probably only fuels his insecurities.

I would seek the guidance of a couples therapist to help set appropriate boundaries in your new relationship.

Dear Annie: I have been in this relationship for 12 years now, and I love my boyfriend very much. Where I am lost is, a few years into our relationship, I caught him signing up for dating sites.

At first, his excuse was that "it was old stuff from before we got together." Well, at one point, he had a profile on 172 dating sites. Every time I would confront him, it was a different lie, and then it got to where he would turn it around and make it my fault as to why he was on them. (Because I was "being a b——" is why he went on them.) He tells me it's nothing and that he never talks to anyone on them.

He had cancer in 2014, and from chemo and all the treatment, his physical performance is not at its best, so we don't even have sex anymore, which I have come to understand that if I want to be with him, is something I have to deal with. I'm OK with that, but I'm not OK that I'm doing without while he checks out other women on dating sites. I am seriously considering leaving him because I feel very disrespected and belittled by his actions. Please help. — Lost but in Love

Dear Lost: Similar to "Confused Lady," in the first part of today's column, it sounds like your boyfriend, too, is a gaslighter. Turning his infidelity, curiosity or boredom into your fault is clear manipulation.

"Disrespected" and "belittled" are never ways you should feel in a relationship, especially one as long term as this. Without loyalty and trust in one another, you'll never have a fulfilling relationship. Put this one to bed. There are plenty of other fish in the sea.

Jefferson jobless rate shows slight increase despite more entering workforce

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Based U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, Jefferson County employed more workers in January while the county's unemployment rate also increased slightly due to more people entering the workforce.

Jefferson County's 1.3% unemployment rate in December increased in 2% in January based on data released Tuesday by the Indiana Department of Workforce Development. At the same time there were 20 more residents employed in January but that also left more unemployed due to growth in the workforce. Jefferson County's workforce, set at 14,688 in December, was 14,826 in January. The number employed in December was 14,503 and 14,523 in January. Jefferson County's total unemployed in January was 303 compared to 185 in December.

Meanwhile, Switzerland County's unemployment rate in January was 2.4%, an increase from 1.4% in January. Switzerland County's workforce increased in January to 4.575, 17 more than December when it was 4,558. The number of jobs in January in Switzerland County was 4,467, a decline from 4,495 in December. Switzerland County's total unemployed in January was 108 compared to 63 in December.

At 4.2%, Lake County had the Indiana's highest unemployment rate in January with Howard County next highest at 4% followed by LaPorte and Starke counties at 3.3%, and Fayette County at 3.2%. The state's lowest unemployment rate was LaGrange County at 1.4%.

Jefferson County's 2% rate tied with Benton, Clinton, Huntington, Jay, Knox, Monroe and Putnam counties for 55th. Switzerland County's 2.4% rate tied with Blackford, Henry, Parke and Vanderburgh counties for 28th.

Rates for other neighboring Indiana counties include Scott and Jennings counties, 2.6% and tied for 17th highest in the state; Ripley County, 2.3% and tied for 34th highest; Clark and Dearborn counties, 2.2% and tied for 40th highest; and Ohio County, 1.9% and tied for 63rd.

Indiana's unemployment for December was 2.4%, continuing a record low for the state dating back to 1976, according to the Indiana Department of Workforce Development. In addition, private sector employment increased by 1,500 jobs over the last month and has now grown for seven of the last eight months, resulting in a gain of 85,800 jobs year-over-year.

The national unemployment rate in January was 4%, an increase from 3.9% in December.

Indiana's first regional digital inclusion plan coming to southeastern Indiana

BY SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

Southeastern Indiana Regional Planning Commission (SIRPC) in partnership with the Purdue Center for Regional Development (PCRD) announced Wednesday the launch of Indiana's first regional digital inclusion plan to bring broadband internet service to more households in local counties.

The SIRPC regional digital inclusion plan is designed to bridge the digital divide by making broadband existent, affordable and accessible for all people in the Southeastern Indiana (SEI) region. This initiative is a direct result of the State of Broadband Report that PCRD conducted in 2019 on behalf of SIRPC and their respective community foundations.

"SIRPC works to improve the quality of life within Southeastern Indiana," said Mary McCarty, SIRPC executive director. "It is our goal to assist in the development of a thriving economy within our nine-county region, and the digital inclusion plan is an integral part of this strategic effort. Our organization is thrilled to have the opportunity to move forward with the very first regional digital inclusion plan of this kind!"

Along with SIRPC and PCRD, the regional digital inclusion taskforce was a key player and driving force behind the development of the plan. The taskforce was composed of local elected officials, local economic development organizations, and community foundation representatives. The taskforce members worked together from January to October 2021 to develop the first draft of the plan.

Goals of the plan include:

- Build/upgrade affordable, scalable, and future proof broadband throughout the community and improve adoption.
- Ensure all residents have reasonable access to quality, affordable, and reliable devices as well as a trusted technical support to maintain, upgrade, and use these devices.
- Provide a perpetual digital literacy ecosystem — multi-faceted across multiple technologies — offering support and equitable access to people of all ages and abilities for the region's digital activities.
- Include connectivity, devices, and digital skills into local and regional community and economic development strategies through public private partnerships, coordination, and assessments resulting in a sustainable digital equity ecosystem.

In addition to the plan outlining goals and strategies to move the region toward digital inclusion, it also provides a snapshot of the digital inclusion conditions in the region. For example, roughly 95% of housing units in Dearborn County had access to 100/20 Mbps while less than 2% had access to this same speed in Ohio and Switzerland counties.

The SIRPC board endorsed the plan on March 9. The next steps will be to strategize with the digital inclusion county ambassadors to develop an action plan to achieve the goals within the next five years.

"Digital inequalities affect businesses, organizations, residents, and workers alike and if not addressed, may place a region at a competitive disadvantage, said PCRD director, Roberto Gallardo. "I applaud the SIPRC region for taking the initiative to place their region at the forefront of digital inclusion."

The Economic Development Administration (EDA) also provided additional funding to University Centers across the country thanks to the CARES Act passed in March 2020. As part of this effort, PCRD collaborated with the SIRPC to develop their regional digital inclusion plan.

The full SIRPC regional digital inclusion plan can be viewed at: Southeast Indiana Regional Planning Commission-Digital Inclusion Plan (sirpc.org).

PARK

"It made me nervous last week when the power went out," Williams said.

- Amber Maddox, a resident of Volz Drive, asked about the town's policies concerning large vehicles sitting along the sides of streets or in residents' yards for an extended time. She specifically referenced a purple bus she said has been parked in a yard for a long time without moving and noted the vehicle blocks vision on the street.

"When I back out of my driveway, it's hard to see around that," Maddox said, noting there are often fast-moving vehicles on the highway that make it dangerous if one is unable to see well. "It's going to cause an accident someday ... it's extremely busy and I'm constantly having to rein the kids in" because of the traffic.

Council member Debbie Kroger said an ordinance already exists that prohibits parking vehicles in the grass or on sides of streets. She also said "No Parking along the Street" signs were supposed to be placed in areas throughout the town where it is not safe to park along the street, but that was never done. Williams will be ordering signs to be placed in town where needed.

- Approved a resolution for a Capital Asset Management Policy, which town attorney Devon Sharpe noted was recommended during the town's audit by the State Board of Accounts that has been underway in recent weeks. Sharpe said the policy will provide guidance on managing assets with a formula for the town's assets to depreciate appropriately. "I think this is something that's important," he said, noting it also meets state requirements.

Mefford said the assets include structures, vehicles and anything the town owns that is valued at more than $5,000.

He added that the State Board of Accounts audit is "near the end and they're getting ready to schedule a closing meeting.

"It's my first one" since becoming Hanover's clerk-treasurer in 2020. "It's been interesting but it's been pretty uneventful, which has been good too."

- Kroger reported that 500 redbuds trees arrived Sunday that are in the process of being planted throughout the town. She said the Southwestern High School baseball team has been helping plant trees at various locations throughout the town including Hanover United Methodist Church, Jefferson County Public Library's Hanover branch, and several town residences. The redbud trees were provided through an $8,000 grant from the Community Foundation.
- Established a Tree-Floral Initiative Committee to serve as an advisory committee to the town council. The committee was charged with seeking grants and possible fundraising ideas to improve upon the town's environment. The committee will consist of up to 10 members including two town council members, the town building inspector, and community representatives or business representatives as appointed by the town council.
- Considered creating a Senior Citizens Advisory Council, which Sharpe said the town council had earlier expressed interest in doing but was never done. Council members said it was still a good idea but the matter was tabled for a more detailed review with senior citizens representatives. The Council also approved establishing a $300 petty cash fund for the town's senior citizens program on a trial basis.
- Senior Citizens Day to tour the Hanover Presbyterian Church will be 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Thursday, March 31, as the church considers ways to better utilize its building to benefit the community.
- Appointed Kroger as the council's representative on the Southeastern Indiana Regional Planning Commission.
- Scheduled the Clean-up Hanover Days from July 16-23 to include two Saturdays in which dumpsters will be available for town residents.

it was used for various other purposes until the Courier purchased it and began using it to store newsprint.

During the acquisition and renovation process, the Chandlers have discovered a few artifacts such as handwritten receipts from the Louis Eisenhardt Livery and an aluminum sign used by the bottle works. Matt anticipates displays featuring historic memorabilia in the lobby, along with having an art gallery to feature local artists. He also wants to host activities such as wine tastings.

"We really want to be a good tourism partner," he said.

Matt Chandler grew up on a strawberry farm in Cross Plains that his parents, Steve and Linda Chandler, still operate, but frequently spent time in Madison to visit his grandparents. After graduating from South Ripley High School, he went to IUPUI where he earned a bachelor's degree in tourism management. During that time, he did an internship at the Brick Street Inn, an eight-room hotel in Zionsville that left a strong impression.

"I always said that was my favorite job, like the best job I had ever had," said Matt.

After college, he worked in food and beverage management at the downtown Marriott in Indianapolis then decided to return to southeastern Indiana where he worked seven years at Belterra Casino and Resort in Florence until being promoted to human resources at Belterra Park in Cincinnati, where he currently works.

In the meantime, Matt gradually began to venture into the Airbnb business in Jefferson County, the first being a property he named Cabin on the Ridge, located in Shelby Township east of Canaan. That cabin had actually been Matt's residence for five years before he started to rent it out, and it quickly became successful with an annual 98% occupancy rate. That led Matt to partner with Dan to build another cabin nearby that he calls Cabin on the Ridge: The Sequel.

"That's where I really started to learn that there's a real love for Madison because everyone who was coming out there, and staying at these cabins are coming to this beautiful town," he said. Matt also operates a third Airbnb with his mother — The Artist's A-Frame on Elmhurst Street on Madison's hilltop where his grandparents had lived. He said all three Airbnbs are thriving, leading him to now take the next step forward with The Chandler.

"It's been pretty much a project every year and every single one we've put our hands on has turned out phenomenal," said Dan, noting each project has built on the others. "We're taking active steps to get to the point in our lives where we want to be."

And Madison is where they want to be.

"We love Madison and we knew that was our goal to eventually come to Madison and live here full-time and be more integrated into the community," said Matt, noting Madison is where he and Dan can "expand our business and our entrepreneurship. "

Dan, a native of Louisville, is a psychiatric mental health nurse practitioner at Glenwood Behavioral Health Hospital in Cincinnati. Earlier in his career, he had been a nurse in a trauma center, and "loved what I did," especially in helping others, but "my passion grew from that to be of service to those suffering from mental health issues." He is now transitioning to doing telehealth outpatient that will allow him to work from home via video conference calls once the hotel opens. He said it's technology that not only will benefit him, but also allow patients to be assisted in rural areas that may not be able to drive the distance to a city hospital.

Despite growing up in nearby Louisville, Dan said he "was introduced to Madison when I first met Matt, and fell in love with it right off the bat. It had always been my dream to kind of start my own business and when I met Matt, I saw his businesses run, and then we were introduced to Madison, it was always our hope to come back and do a project that we're both passionate about."

They said the hotel will follow an invisible service concept in which guests can experience the local lifestyle in a space that feels like home, yet anticipates the needs of guests.

"People when they book, they will get a key code in, and they will have a community space. They will have same key code that will be individualized for their rooms," said Matt, noting each will have self-check in.

"It really puts the power of their stay in guests' hands," Dan said. "You to come in, be relaxed, be at home as soon as you get there, and know you have control of your entire stay."

Matt described it as "a streamlined stay with access to a local concierge" with him residing on the property to provide any assistance guests need including information on what's happening in the community and places to go.

So far, Matt said Madison has been very welcoming to them and their venture. "We have been blessed to work with the people that we have, they have been very supportive. The city has rolled out the red carpet for us. It's been really great."

Matt said they want to be a part of promoting everything Madison. "We're going to promote the town, the merchants and the restaurants, the city and the festivals, and where to go, and what to eat, what concert to see, or event to visit. We're really trying to empower the guest to be a local."

Matt and Dan are looking forward to being part of the Madison scene. They can't hold back their excitement about living and being in Madison. For now, they live in their home in Florence, Indiana, and both commute daily to work in Cincinnati. But once The Chandler opens, they plan to convert their house in Florence into another Airbnb, and move into the owner's suite at The Chandler and become a part of the Madison community.

"We really want the vision," said Matt. "We really want to cultivate community partnerships and partner with local merchants" and make "it to be a very local experience. And a very inclusive experience. It's important to us that all are welcome here. That's a very important message that we want to share with the community. We want to be integrated into this community."

Matt said he can't hold back his elation and is anxiously anticipating a time when he and Dan will be operating their hotel in Madison. "It can't happen soon enough."

Kruse drives in 7 in Hanover in DH vs. Asbury

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Hanover College softball finally got a chance to play a game on its home field and responded with a doubleheader split with Asbury on Tuesday.

The Panthers, who had scheduled home openers against Hope over the weekend postponed due to the weather, dropped a 7-3 decision to Asbury in the opener but regrouped with an 8-3 win in game two.

Asbury took control of game one with a pair of three-run innings, in the third and sixth innings, and scored a single run in the fourth to take a 7-0 lead.

Hanover rallied and nearly overcame the deficit. Kendra Hutchison opened the bottom of the sixth for the Panthers by drawing a walk and Carson Kruse followed by reaching on a fielder's choice. A wild pitch moved both runners up and Hutchison then scored on an error.

Hanover wasn't done yet. Lexi Garloch walked to lead the bases and Alex Miller hit a two-run double to left to close the gap to 7-3. But Asbury's Anna Grace Duncan induced two pop ups to end the threat and the inning. The Panthers then went down in order in the seventh.

Hanover managed five hits in the game, all singles by Kensie Bradley, Kruse, Beaman, Miller and Mallorie Fultz. Gracie Henson (1-3) started and suffered the loss after allowing four earned runs on six hits in five and a third innings.

Olivia Palasek had two hits and two RBIs and Jenni Beasley had two hits and scored twice to lead Asbury. McKenzie Meyer struck out six and allowed three unearned runs in five innings for the win.

Cruse had a monster game at the plate with four hits — including a home run — and six RBIs to lead Hanover in the 8-3 game two win.

Kruse, a freshman from Fort Branch, Indiana, hit a three-run home run in the bottom of the first to erase a 2-0 deficit. She then hit an RBI double in the third as part of another three-run inning, and added a two-run single in the fourth as Hanover pushed ahead 8-3. She capped her four-hit day with a single in the sixth.

Kruse was not the only Panther to swing a hot bat. Carson Bennett, Lily Beurman, Garloch and Katherine Dickinson each had two hits as part of a 15-hit attack by Hanover. Garloch and Dickinson each also had RBIs.

Beurman (3-2) went the distance in the circle to pick up the win for Hanover. The grad student from Evansville scattered three earned runs on seven hits while striking out one and not walking a batter.

Palasek had a double, a single and scored twice to lead Asbury, while Taylor Sanders had a double and an RBI. Kaylee Strunk gave up six runs on 10 hits in three innings and took the loss.

Hanover, now 5-5 on the season, heads to Georgetown, Kentucky, this weekend to take part in the Pioneer Classic. The Panthers will face Illinois Wesleyan and Muskingum on Saturday and Case Western and Wittenberg on Sunday. Hanover returns home on Saturday, March 26, to play Denison.

Indiana tops turnover-prone Wyoming in First Four

BY MITCH STACY

DAYTON, Ohio — University of Dayton Arena was rocking, thanks to hordes of Indiana fans who made the drive to the First Four to see the Hoosiers play in the NCAA Tournament for the first time since 2016.

The 13,400-seat newly renovated venue just got louder as Indiana pulled away late to cap a 66-58 win over turnover-prone Wyoming on Tuesday night, sending the 12th-seeded Hoosiers (21-13) to a first-round East regional game to face fifth-seeded St. Mary's on Thursday.

Trayce Jackson-Davis had 29 points and nine rebounds, Jordan Geromino — who averaged 3.9 points this season — scored a career-high 15.

"I thought our defense was really the key when we were struggling offensively to make shots," Indiana coach Mike Woodson said. "But we just kept grinding, and I found another player tonight off the bench and that was Geronimo, who gave us a major, major lift tonight. And Trayce was who he's been pretty much all year."

Indiana forward Trayce Jackson-Davis drives past Wyoming's Graham Ike (33) and Drake Jeffries (0) during their First Four game in the NCAA tournament on Tuesday in Dayton.

Indiana opened a 10-point lead over the Cowboys (25-9) with less than two minutes left. Wyoming's Drake Jeffries hit a pair of foul shots to get the Cowboys within six with 14 seconds to go, but Jeffries had to foul Indiana's Xavier Johnson, who hit a pair from the stripe to put it out of reach.

Hunter Maldonado paced the Cowboys with 21 points but turned the ball over 10 times. Graham Ike had 17 to go along with and nine rebounds. The Cowboys had 19 turnovers leading to 17 Indiana points.

"We were a team for most of the year up until the last two or three weeks where we were in the top 25 in the country in turnover percentage, but you know, (we) give that team 19 empty possessions when I thought for the most part we were getting the shots we wanted to get," Wyoming coach Jeff Linder said.

Both teams were firing away from the outside early on but not much was falling. Indiana led 30-25 lead at the half despite shooting just 32% and hitting 1 of 8 from 3-point range.

The Cowboys couldn't keep the handle, turning the ball over 13 times in the opening half, including seven by Maldonado.

Wyoming didn't shoot much better in the half, either, just 39%.

"I've seen traps and doubles all year, it wasn't anything too special, but I tried to force it a little more than I probably should have," Maldonado said.

Indiana showed typical Big Ten aggressiveness in wearing down Wyoming as the second half went on and taking control despite less-than-stellar shooting. The Hoosiers shot 41.9%, but scored 46 points in the paint.

"It's huge. It's surreal," said Jackson-Davis, a junior forward who leads Indiana in scoring. "This environment, even just for the First Four game it was a surreal environment.

"I've always dreamed about playing in this tournament and finally being able to live out that dream and just performing at the highest level, I'm truly grateful."

Indiana moves on to face St. Mary's as the 12th seed in the East Region on Thursday at Portland, Oregon (TV: Live on TBS at 7:20 p.m.).

Bengals sign Cappa, Karras, re-sign Hill

BY MITCH STACY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Cincinnati Bengals went right to free agency for their biggest area of need, agreeing to contracts with a pair of offensive linemen on Monday.

People with knowledge of the deals confirmed to The Associated Press that the Bengals reached agreements with Tampa Bay Buccaneers guard Alex Cappa and offensive lineman Ted Karras, formerly of the New England Patriots.

The sources spoke on condition of anonymity because the contracts can't be made official until Wednesday.

The 27-year-old Cappa, who allowed just one sack last season for the Bucs while protecting Tom Brady, agreed to a four-year, $40 million deal. Cappa earned a Super Bowl ring with the Bucs in 2021.

Karras, 28, agreed to a three-year, $18 million deal.

The six-year veteran allowed three sacks last season.

The Bengals had among the worst pass protection units in the NFL, and it was laid bare in the playoffs. Cincinnati allowed a record-setting nine sacks in its playoff game against the Tennessee Titans, and in the Super Bowl, the Los Angeles Rams sacked Joe Burrow a record-tying seven times in beating the Bengals.

On Tuesday the Bengals re-signed defensive tackle B.J. Hill to a three-year, $30 contract.

Hill was a critical player on the Bengals' defensive line during their run to the Super Bowl last season, especially after the injury to Larry Ogunjobi, who is expected to sign elsewhere.

The 26-year-old Hill came to Cincinnati last August via a trade with the New York Giants in exchange for little-used offensive lineman Billy Price.

Hill went on to play in 16 regular-season games and all four playoff games, with three postseason starts.

He had 50 tackles and was fourth on the team with 5 1/2 sacks. In the postseason, he had 13 tackles, 1 1/2 sacks and intercepted a pass.

If the Bengals had not signed Hill, he would have become a free agent at 4 p.m. Wednesday.

Dupps' homer lifts Hanover over Centre

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Jacob Dupps hit a two-run home run in the third inning and Hanover College held on for a 5-4 win over Centre in the Panthers' delayed baseball home opener on Tuesday.

Hanover, which had a three-game series at home against Spalding over the weekend postponed due to weather, found itself in a 2-0 hole after a half-inning when an error and a two-run single by Josh Cunningham staked Centre to a 2-0 lead.

Hanover answered right back in the bottom of the first. Three walks sandwiched around a flyout loaded the bases for Connor Farnsley, who hit an infield single to shortstop and an error on the play allowed two runs to score and tie the game 2-2.

Hanover jumped out to a 5-2 lead in the third. Alex Christie opened the frame with a double before Dupps bombed a two-run home run to left field. Farnsley walked and came home on Eric Roudebush's double to right field.

The Panthers maintained that three-run lead until the ninth inning with Centre made one final rally. Three-straight singles by the Colonels brought in one run and a RBI double by Jordan Gunter closed the gap to 5-4. Centre still had two runners on base but reliever Charlie Joyce struck out the final batter to end the game.

Charlie Burton had a single and a double to lead Hanover at the plate while Farnsley was 2-for-2 with a run and an RBI. Jake Danneman added a hit.

Jamie Laframboise had two hits and scored a run to lead Centre.

David Campbell

Hanover's Jacob Dupps (7) is greeted by teammates after hitting a 2-run home run in the Panthers' win over Centre on Tuesday.

Jordan Parker (1-1) started on the mound for Hanover and picked up the win after allowing two earned runs on five hits in five and a third innings with three strikeouts and two walks. Joyce worked the final three and two-thirds innings and got his first save of the season.

Ben Trammell suffered the loss in relief of starter Will Orren.

Hanover, now 3-7 on the season, heads to Wabash this weekend for a three-game series. The two teams will play a doubleheader on Saturday and a single game on Sunday. The Panthers return home on Saturday, March 26 when they host Ohio Wesleyan.

Hanover lacrosse routs Wilmington 21-2

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Hanover's offense started quickly and never stopped, rolling to a 21-2 win over visiting Wilmington in men's lacrosse Monday at Alumni Stadium.

The Panthers wasted little time, scoring the only goals they would need in the first seven minutes of the game. Owen Parker scored his eighth and ninth goals of the season in a 43-second span to give Hanover a 2-0 lead less than three minutes into the match. Zach Stone followed with another goal four minutes later and the Panthers got markers from Owen Cuniffe, Nick Adams and Dirk Meinhart over the next five minutes to build a 6-0 first-quarter advantage.

Hanover tacked on six more goals in the second quarter — shots by Adams, Josh Perkins, Cuniffe (two), Alex Kleinhelter, and Zach Stone — as the Panthers leaped ahead 12-0 with 4:32 left in the first half.

Wilmington (2-4) finally broke the run with a goal late in the second quarter by Reed Beavers and a marker from Brock Fugate early in the third cut the Hanover lead to 12-2, but the Panthers then produced another nine-goal burst to turn the match into a rout.

Meinhart, Cuniffe, Stone, Adams and Kleinhelter (twice) each scored as the Panthers took an 18-2 lead after three quarters and Kleinhelter, Cuniffe and Perkins each scored again in the fourth for the final margin.

Cuniffe finished the match with five goals on 13 shots to lead Hanover while Kleinhelter had four goals on 12 shots and added two assists. Stone scored three times and had two assists, Adams had three goals and an assist, Perkins had two goals and two assists, Parker scored twice and had an assist, and Meinhart had two goals.

Hanover held a 67-19 advantage in shots and also had 14 turnovers to 24 by Wilmington. The Panthers were also 34-for-35 on clears and had 50 ground balls. Sean O'Meara had two saves in 31 minutes in goal for the Panthers. Jackson McKeigue had five saves in 28 minutes of action.

Hanover, now 4-2 on the season, travels to Mequon, Wisconsin, on Saturday to take on Concordia University. The Panthers will then have a week off before traveling to Adrian, Michigan, on Saturday, March 26.

Greene working toward joining Reds rotation

BY THERESA SMITH
ASSOCIATED PRESS

GOODYEAR, Ariz. — Hunter Greene is well aware that the player he might be replacing in the Cincinnati Reds' starting rotation is also among the players who helped put him in contention for it.

While the right-handed rookie's rise to the starting rotation appeared possible with the offseason departure of Wade Miley to the Cubs, even more opportunity arose with Sonny Gray's trade to the Twins on Sunday. Gray worked with Greene in the offseason, sharing his approach to physical and mental preparation.

"Anyone who has ever talked to Sonny knows how detailed-oriented he is," said Greene, who was also assisted by Marcus Stroman of the Cubs.

Stroman reached out in 2017 when Greene was drafted by the Reds in the first round, the second-overall pick out of Notre Dame High School in Sherman Oaks, California. The pair stayed in touch, but did not work out together until this past offseason when Stroman was in the Los Angeles area.

With veterans like Gray and Stroman preparing him for the season, Greene feels like he belongs in the big leagues.

"I used to walk by (the major league clubhouse) and think about what it would be like to be in there," Greene said.

Greene's velocity and skill set foretold a fast race through the minor leagues, yet after throwing 68⅓ innings in Low-A Dayton and posting a 4.48 ERA in 2018, a torn elbow ligament led to Tommy John surgery. The subsequent rehabilitation cost Greene the 2019 and 2020 seasons.

In 2021, the 6-foot-5, 230-pound Greene split time between Double-A Chattanooga (41 innings, 1.98 ERA, 60 strikeouts and 14 walks) and Triple-A Louisville (65⅓ innings, 4.13 ERA, 79 strikeouts and 25 walks).

At both sites, Greene's fast ball ranged between 99 and 102 mph.

"It's the real deal," said second-year catcher Tyler Stephenson.

Stephenson, who looks forward to building a rapport with Greene amid bullpens and clubhouse conversations, was not the only one talking about Greene being major-league ready.

"We're all excited to see Hunter," said Reds manager David Bell. "He's healthy, he had a full season last year. We know what he's capable of, the kind of person he is, the kind of talent he is. I believe he's ready."

Regarding the effect of Gray's departure, Bell said, "I mean this creates even more of an opportunity for Hunter. Hunter just has to go out and be himself and do his thing. All that will take care of itself. We're looking forward to seeing him pitch, seeing where he is."

Mariners land All-Star Winker, Suárez in trade with Reds

BY TIM BOOTH
ASSOCIATED PRESS

As soon as the baseball lockout ended, Seattle Mariners general manager Jerry Dipoto was focused on two things he wanted for his lineup. He wanted another power bat, and he wanted a left-handed hitter who could play in the outfield.

Dipoto landed both in one deal, acquiring All-Star outfielder Jesse Winker and third baseman Eugenio Suárez from the Cincinnati Reds on Monday in exchange for a package of players.

"We feel like these guys make our lineup longer, a lot more ominous. We feel like it gives us the lineup depth that playoff teams have," Dipoto said at the Mariners' spring training complex in Peoria, Arizona. "This was a goal of ours heading into the offseason."

Winker gives Seattle a left-handed hitter who has thrived when facing right-handed pitching in recent seasons and can player in the outfield. And while Suarez has been inconsistent since undergoing shoulder surgery in early 2020, he provides a major power boost and is just three seasons removed from hitting 49 home runs.

"This is what we cited as a goal, and during the offseason, was to make our lineup longer to find impact," Dipoto said. "It's hard to make trades and this one was especially painful because this is the first time truly that we've gone out and acquired what I would call now premium offensive players and we haven't been in that position. We were forced to give up maybe a little bit more than we would have liked to and that's part of the business."

Seattle is sending pitcher Justin Dunn, outfielder Jake Fraley and top pitching prospect Brandon Williamson and a player to be named to the Reds. Dunn has appeared in 25 career games but was shut down due to shoulder trouble last season. Fraley hit .210 with nine homers and 36 RBIs last season. Williamson was one of the top-rated prospects in Seattle's system, but has yet to pitch above Double-A.

Winker is coming off the best season of his career after hitting .305 with 24 home runs and 71 RBIs. He's precisely the type of player that Dipoto had said he was hoping to add to the lineup.

Winker seems likely to be in a rotation in left field and will get plenty of at-bats as a designated hitter.

"I'm looking forward to getting to Seattle. I can't wait," Winker said. "It's an opportunity to win. It's an opportunity to win a division, to play in the postseason. I've been looking forward to that opportunity for my whole life."

Adding Suárez to the deal helps solidify the Mariners' lineup. Suárez hit just .198 last season but still added 31 home runs. He closed the season on a surge, hitting .370 with an .808 slugging percentage in the final month of the season.

Suárez hit 83 home runs and had 207 RBIs during the 2018 and 2019 seasons combined. Seattle will be taking on a chunk of salary with Suárez. He's owed $11 million each of the next three seasons as part of a deal signed with the Reds in 2018.

Suárez seemed surprised by the trade and was saddened to be leaving the Reds.

"This is not easy this stuff, but I understand this game is like that," Suárez said.

Suárez also answers the question of who is going step in at third base after the retirement of Kyle Seager.

Rams' Whitworth retires after 16 years capped by first ring

BY GREG BEACHAM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

A month after Andrew Whitworth reached the pinnacle of his long football career, he decided to go out on top.

The 40-year-old left tackle announced his retirement Tuesday after a 16-season NFL career capped by his first Super Bowl championship last month with the Los Angeles Rams.

"The warrior in me wants to go again, but the body just doesn't," Whitworth said. "The body is tired. As driven as I am ... it's just time to realize while I still have the spirit and the fighting attitude that maybe there's new people and new things, new ways that I can fight."

Whitworth made his long-anticipated decision official 30 days after after the Rams beat his former team, the Cincinnati Bengals, to win his first ring. He tried to keep his farewell news conference a secret, but several appreciative teammates still found out about it and showed up at the Rams' training complex, including Matthew Stafford and Super Bowl MVP Cooper Kupp.

Whitworth became the oldest player to start at left tackle in the modern NFL after he turned 40 last December.

The two-time All-Pro selection then protected Stafford's blind side all the way to a 23-20 victory in the Super Bowl at the Rams' own SoFi Stadium.

While almost nobody thinks Whitworth's play has slipped significantly, he recognized his body is wearing down, and he wanted to get out in front of it — like any good left tackle, of course.

"Over time, I started to feel that I didn't want to be a disservice to my teammates with starting to lose the ability to truly be out there, giving them what they deserve," Whitworth said. "I would never want that for them. I want them to be successful, and I want every dream they ever had to come true. If I'm in the way of that at all, that would be one of the worst things I could ever be a part of. It was just realizing it was time from a body standpoint."

Whitworth said as recently as December he hoped to play out the next year of his contract with the Rams in 2022, but the opportunity to go out on a championship proved too enticing to the lineman and his family. Whitworth and his wife, Melissa, have four children.

Whitworth spent his final five seasons with the Rams, who signed him shortly after hiring Sean McVay as their head coach in 2017. The massive offensive lineman was the cornerstone of McVay's transformative offense in Los Angeles, leading the team to five consecutive winning seasons, four playoff berths, three NFC West titles, two Super Bowl appearances and one championship.

Whitworth also was selected the NFL's Walter Payton Man of the Year last season for his extensive charitable work and mentorship to younger teammates, along with his excellent play. While a broadcast career seems an easily achievable goal for the talkative, avuncular lineman, Whitworth plans to remain deeply involved as a community leader.

"You want to feel real inadequate, start looking at what Andrew Whitworth has accomplished," McVay said. "I can't think of anything that epitomizes our team better than the way Andrew leads. He's the kind of guy that you want to be better for, because of the way he treats everyone he comes in contact with."

Engaging Tshiebwe thriving on, off the court with UK

BY GARY B. GRAVES
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON, Ky. — An engaging Oscar Tshiebwe has won over Kentucky basketball fans with his record-breaking play on the court and affable personality off of it.

The 6-foot-9 native of the Democratic Republic of the Congo anchors the No. 7 Wildcats' attack with his tenacity on the court, including rebounding skills not seen at Kentucky in a generation. He feels blessed to be in this position and he never seems to stop smiling.

"I just spend more time to do better the things that I'm able to do, like the rebounding and running the floor," said Tshiebwe, a junior who transferred last spring after 1½ seasons at West Virginia. "The rest of the things are coming. ... My offense is getting better, my passing ability's getting better.

"It's about doing what you do best, (and) keep getting better."

And he is truly enjoying the journey.

Tshiebwe fulfills nearly every autograph and selfie request almost to a fault, which can jeopardize any schedule he tries to keep.

He recently appeared at a Lexington church, where his accommodation of photo-seeking-fans upon arrival delayed the service and his sermon about 30 minutes. A Wildcat teammate once chided him for running late as he signed autographs outside the dormitory as they were boarding the team van bound for Rupp Arena.

"That just tells you right there that he really cares for every single fan," guard Sahvir Wheeler said. "He wants every single fan to feel like they've had an impact, or he can make their day with a smile or a picture. And that tells you who he is as a person before a basketball player."

> "He wants every single fan to feel like they've had an impact, or he can make their day with a smile or a picture. And that tells you who he is as a person before a basketball player."
>
> — Sahvir Wheeler
> Kentucky guard

Tshiebwe the person may one day could be leading a congregation, not a basketball team. His late father, Mbuyi, was a pastor and Kentucky's big man often speaks of his faith and recalls a childhood spent in the church.

Last month Tshiebwe attended a service at Broadway Baptist Church, where he spoke for 15 minutes with its growing African congregation. Pastor Daniel Ausbun saw a passion in the player that he said revealed a calling to ministry.

"He genuinely wanted an opportunity to preach and feedback on how he could be a better preacher," said Ausbun, who added that Tshiebwe spent another 40 minutes afterward greeting people.

"It's like basketball. Coach (John) Calipari has talked about how hard he works in the gym and in practice," the pastor said. "He did the same in preaching."

On the court, Tshiebwe isn't the only reason Kentucky (26-7) is in the mix to win a ninth national championship. The Wildcats are seeded No. 2 in the East Region have perhaps their best mix of experience since the 2012 title team led by freshman Anthony Davis.

Kentucky's backcourt trio features veterans Wheeler and Kellan Grady— both transfers — and freshman TyTy Washington Jr., while the frontcourt boasts junior holdover Keion Brooks Jr. and Tshiebwe. All five starters average at least 10.0 points per contest, giving the Wildcats the scoring depth needed to go deep in the NCAA Tournament.

But Tsheibwe is the clear-cut anchor.

He is averaging 17.0 points and nation-leading 15.1 boards per game. Tshiebwe has had a double-double in 15 straight games. He has a season total of 27 double-doubles — breaking Dan Issel's Kentucky record of 26 set in the 1969-70 season — and is tied with Utah Valley's Fardaws Aimaq for the most in the country.

"The things that he's doing hadn't been done for 50 years," Calipari said. He has "done some good stuff, I can tell you that. I'm proud of him."

So is Tshiebwe's mother, who he hopes can see him display all the good things he is doing in person. He is working to bring Kaya Rosalie stateside in time to see him in the NCAA Tournament.

What Kaya would see is her 255-pound son playing bully ball.

But despite his physicality — Tshiebwe has muscled his way to 58 steals and 53 blocks, both team highs — he has fouled out of a game just once this season. And that came during Saturday's Southeastern Conference Tournament loss to Tennessee.

"Sometimes I just can't believe what I'm doing because I never had a dream of doing everything I'm doing right now," Tshiebwe said. "I think God is helping me and I'm so grateful for everything."

Tshiebwe will likely have more to be thankful for as he could haul in a slew of postseason awards.

He has already been named SEC player of the year by The Associated Press and conference coaches, who also chose him to the all-defensive team.

He's a leading candidate for every national player of the year honor including the Naismith and Wooden awards, where he could become the latter's second winner from Kentucky and first since Davis in 2012.

Tshiebwe wasn't thinking about individual accolades as he sat out last spring and watched Kentucky stumble to a 9-16 record and miss the NCAA Tournament. In 2021, he was seeking a reset after a falloff from a promising freshman season in which he led WVU in scoring and rebounding.

Tshiebwe said in a virtual news conference last April that he was not happy in Morgantown and things were not working. His mood became more upbeat as he looked forward to how his game could flourish at Kentucky.

"He's so relaxed and so comfortable and loves it at Kentucky," said Rick Mancino, who was Tshiebwe's coach at Kennedy Catholic High School near Pittsburgh. "And, he loves the people.

"I think it's mutual. I mean, he cares about them as much as they care about him. And I just think he appreciates that."

Tshiebwe's enthusiasm clearly has rubbed off on teammates.

"He just has really great energy," Washington said, "but like, sometimes it's OK to be a little bit mad. So, I try my best, you know, to rough him up, try to crack jokes on him.

"None of that works. He's still going to be Oscar."

Tshiebwe appreciates the recognition, but said he came to Lexington with the goal of winning a championship. The Wildcats came up short in the SEC Tournament, so now their focus is on the NCAAs. Kentucky opens Thursday night against No. 15 seed St. Peter's (19-11) in Indianapolis.

"The people we're going to go against, it's going to be a war," Tshiebwe said. "I'm not saying it's going to be easy for me; it's going to be a war for both of us."

Big Ten lands three players on AP All-America first team

BY DAVE SKRETTA
AP BASKETBALL WRITER

Keegan Murray has given Iowa a first-team Associated Press All-American for the third straight year, and Kofi Cockburn has made it two in a row for Illinois — not bad for a couple programs that haven't had a whole lot of them.

Throw in Wisconsin's Johnny Davis and the Big Ten was well represented Tuesday on the AP's first team, which also included Kentucky big man Oscar Tshiebwe — this year's player of the year favorite — and Kansas guard Ochai Agbaji.

"I've had to learn from a lot of guys last year just what it takes to be great at this level," said Murray, a sophomore guard from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, who is fourth nationally in scoring at 23.6 points per game heading into the NCAA Tournament.

"I mean, it's kind of like everything just got put together for me," Murray added, "just all the hard work that we put in."

The fifth-seeded Hawkeyes will open their NCAA tourney on Thursday against Richmond.

All the first-team picks have their teams positioned to make a postseason run.

Cockburn, the bruising forward from Kingston, Jamaica, and the fourth-seeded Fighting Illini play Chattanooga on Friday, the same day Davis and the third-seeded Badgers open against Colgate.

Tshiebwe has Kentucky seeded second going into Thursday's game against Saint Peter's. Agbaji and the top-seeded Jayhawks open against one of the play-in teams.

Davis is the Badgers' third first-team All-American, joining Alando Tucker in 2007 and Frank Kaminsky in 2015, while Tshiebwe is the first for Kentucky since Tyler Ulis in 2016. Agbaji gives the Jayhawks a first-team pick for the third time in six years after Frank Mason in 2017 and Devonte Graham in 2018.

Just like Murray with the Hawkeyes, Agbaji already has some experience cutting down nets this season.

The Big 12 player of the year led Kansas past Texas Tech in the conference title game, adding tournament MVP honors to a growing collection of hardware that Agbaji has earned during his senior season.

"It's great to see him do all these things. He's accomplishing pretty much every goal he set out to accomplish," Jayhawks teammate Christian Braun said, "and it's awesome to watch him every day, you know, work hard and practice hard and do all these things, and then accomplish everything he set out to accomplish."

SECOND TEAM

Drew Timme of Gonzaga led the AP second team for the second straight year and was joined by freshman teammate Chet Holmgren. Jaden Ivey of Purdue gave the Big Ten another All-American, while likely No. 1 draft pick Jabari Smith of Auburn and Benedict Mathurin of Arizona rounded out the second team.

The Bulldogs, who are the No. 1 overall seed in the NCAA Tournament for the second straight season, also had two second-team picks last year in Timme and Jalen Suggs. Another teammate, Corey Kispert, was a first-teamer last year.

THIRD TEAM

Paolo Banchero of Duke was the only player from the ACC to be chosen for one of the first three teams, while the Blue Devils were the only team from the vaunted basketball conference to land in the final Top 25 poll this season. Banchero also will go down as the final All-American in a long list to have played for retiring Blue Devils coach Mike Krzyzewski.

Banchero was joined on the third team by Collin Gillespie of Villanova and E.J. Liddell of Ohio State, both of whom were honorable mention picks last season, and Walker Kessler of Auburn. James Akinjo of Baylor and JD Notae of Arkansas tied for the last spot on the third team, giving it six members.

HONORABLE MENTION

David Roddy of Colorado State was the top vote getter among the honorable mention selections. Others to receive the honor include Armando Bacot of North Carolina; Johnny Juzang of UCLA; Alondes Williams of Wake Forest; Tari Eason of LSU; Zach Edey of Purdue; two-time pick Max Abmas of Oral Roberts; and Ron Harper Jr. of Rutgers.

Grizzlies roll without Morant, beat Pacers 135-102

BY MARK AMBROGI
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Desmond Bane scored 21 points, Jaren Jackson Jr. had 19 and the Memphis Grizzlies rolled without All-Star Ja Morant, beating the Indiana Pacers 135-102 on Tuesday night.

De'Anthony Melton added 18 points while Morant sat out with back soreness. The Grizzlies made the decision to hold him out after he went through pregame warmups.

It was the fourth consecutive victory for the Grizzlies. The Pacers have lost two in a row and five of their last six games.

Bane, who grew up about 75 miles away in Richmond, Indiana, said it was great to have so many family and friends at the game.

Steven Adams had 13 points and 13 rebounds for the Grizzlies.

Jalen Smith scored 15 points for Indiana. Buddy Hield and Terry Taylor each had 14.

Tyus Jones, who started in Morant's spot, had 10 assists.

"We shared the ball," Jones said. "We played fast. We played with pace. We played unselfish basketball. Instead taking a good shot, we created for someone else to have a great, wide-open shot. We had everything clicking on both ends of the floor.

"Ja has been out before this year and I just try to step in and fill his shoes the best I can," Jones added. "We just try to get the team to continue to play the right way, play as a team and execute the game plan."

Memphis shot 51% while holding Indiana to 42%. The Pacers were 6 of 30 from 3-point range while the Grizzlies were 15 of 40.

The 33-point loss was the Pacers' largest of the season, topping the previous total of 32 points to Charlotte.

The Grizzlies dominated throughout, leading by as many as 37 in the third quarter before settling for a 104-70 lead after three quarters.

In the fourth quarter, the Pacers' Isaiah Jackson fouled out when he was called for a flagrant foul on a moving screen. Jackson actually fell over Dillon Brooks.

The Pacers' largest deficit was 43 points in the fourth quarter.

Memphis shot 55.6% in the first half to take a 74-49 halftime lead.

"I think looking at the stat sheet and remembering the game, I've got to give them a lot of credit for how they played," Pacers coach Rick Carlisle said. "(It was) very, very difficult night."

Pacers guard Malcolm Brogdon said the Pacers had no chemistry on either end.

"There was no consistency," Brogdon said. "Part of it is new team and attention to detail and coming out being ready to play. That's a real good team out there with or without Ja Morant."

Hield said he hates losing.

"It's hard to forget about this," Hield said, "We can try to flush it out of our minds, but it's human nature, especially as competitors. It'll be hard to sleep."

TIP-INS

Grizzlies: Coach Taylor Jenkins said before the game he doesn't see Morant's back soreness as anything that will linger for multiple games. … Jackson played three seasons for Park Tudor School in Indianapolis before transferring to La Lumiere in LaPorte, Indiana.

Pacers: Brogdon returned to action after missing the past two games with a concussion. He scored 12 points. … Goga Bitzadze was listed as active, but didn't play. He had missed Sunday's game at Atlanta with a lingering foot injury.
